

FOR THEM...

By "them" we mean the 1,250,000 young men and women on the college and university campuses of the nation striving to obtain an education.

It is estimated that eighty per cent of these young people will be leaders as ministers, missionaries, business men, doctors, lawyers and teachers. These young people who will be our successors in the leadership of world affairs are known as the "strategic million."

A recent survey points out that the greatest change away from the Church takes place between the ages of eighteen to twenty-five . . . the same period during which this "strategic million" is educated, finds a job, gets married, and decides many of the vital issues of life.

Presbyterians have the answer to the perplexing problem of keeping the college education of this "strategic million" Christian. Fifty-two Presbyterian Colleges and fifty-two Westminster Foundations (Presbyterian pastorates on state and independent college campuses) and Presbyterian Theological Seminaries stand ready to assist in developing Christian character during that crucial period of life.

The $10,000,000 Sesquicentennial Fund for Christian Education was begun in 1936 to undergird these Presbyterian institutions—to help make them more effective in the vital work at hand.

This is the final opportunity that the entire membership of the Church will have to contribute to the Sesquicentennial Fund.

Make it count!
