

EASTER EVERYWHERE

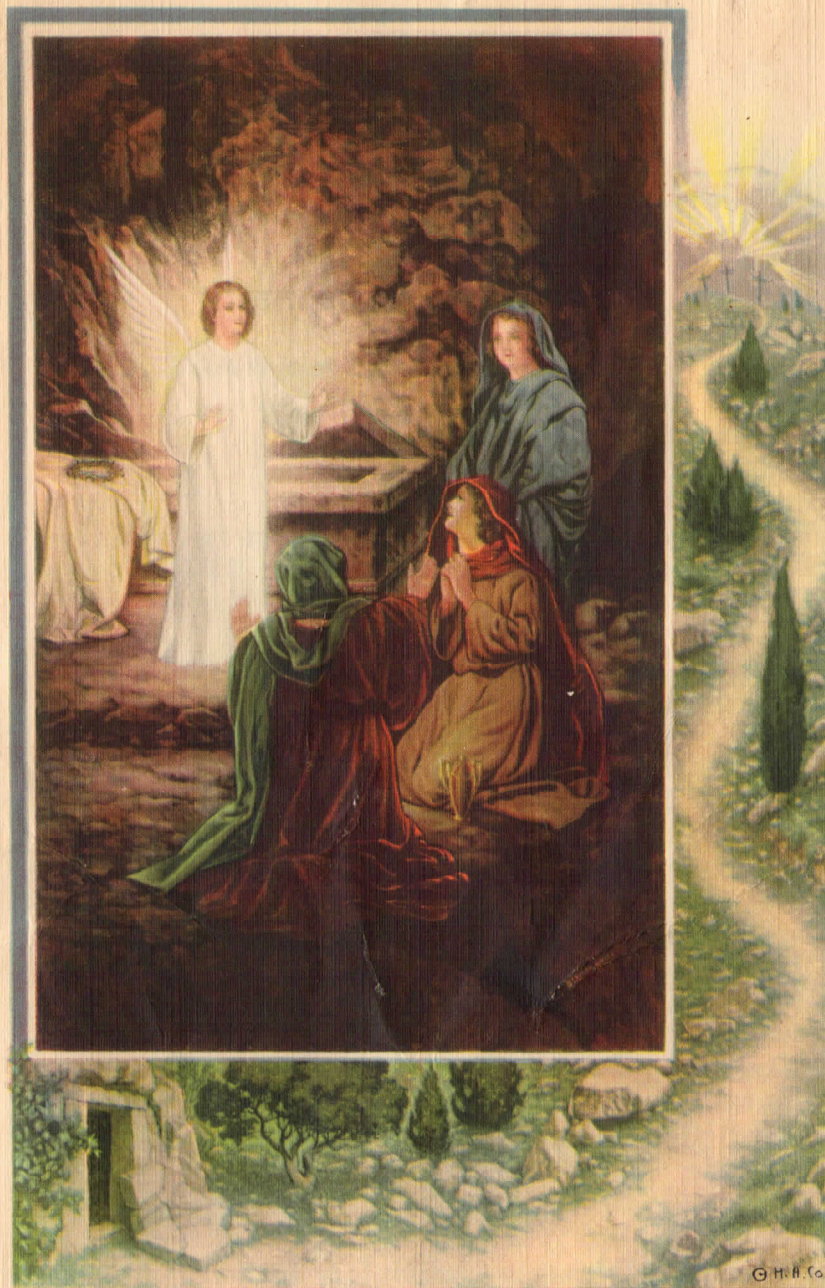

All winter long the earth has been asleep,
But now, like timid chicks who stir and peep,
Wee, unseed things are stretching 'neath the sod.
Gray rootlets take a firmer grip below,
And greener up above the leaflets grow,
As Nature wakes and reaches up to God.

The sky reflects the ocean's deeper blues,
The clouds adorn their rims with softer hues,
And milder blow the winds of early spring;
The sap begins to feed the maple red
And clothe in green the branches overhead,
The birds come back like couriers on the wing.

And hark! To you and me a message low
Is wafted as the softer breezes blow,—
A message of the love and truth of God;
To every little child who looks above,
To everyone whose heart is filled with love,
A message of the faith and peace of God.

So long as lilies breath in fragrance pure,
So long as earth and man and life endure,
God's gifts of beauty bless us in the spring.
So ring, ye bells of Easter morn, for joy,
And sing, ye children, every girl and boy,
While peace in all the world is blossoming.
